AMERICA'S COAL AND IRON

inate the Commerce of the World. BALTIMORE, MD., June 9.-Special. Comemnting upon the outlook for our country controlling the commerce of the world, Mr. Richard H. Edmonds, editor word, Mr. Remard H. Edmons, eather of the Manfacturere' Record, says.

"Alabama dictates the price of pig fron for the world; American steel-rail makers, in competition with European makers, are supplying rails to Australia, Russia, China and other countries, Rusda has awarded contracts to our ship builders for warships to cost over $15,000,0000, and is negotiating for others; our steel mills are shiping thousands of tons of ship plates to leading shipbuilding firms in Great Britain—these are but s few of the more striking facts now at-tracting world-wide attention, which in-dicate the mightiest industrial revolution of our country from its instoric mactivity in foreign affairs to what seems to be its destiny as the dominating power is not more wonderful nor more far-reach-ing in its influence than the part it is now equipped to play in the world's in-

"It has been well said 'that country which can produce iron and steel at the lowest cost will control and dominate the commerce of the world,' and it is now universally admitted that we are producing iron and steel at less cost than any the country of the world, and it is now universally admitted that we are producing iron and steel at less cost than any the country. As we are additions the other country. As we are dictating the price of iron and steel throughout the world, the control of the vast industries based on these raw materials is already passing, if it has not fully passed, into American hands. It is difficult to grasp the full meaning of this, and it is still more difficult to soberly portray its effect upon our own country and upon its relation to other countries. "Great Britain's supremacy in the word's affairs, its great financial power and its vast shipping interests are largely due to its fron, steel and ceal interests. Upon them it has built its interests. Upon them it has built his commercial empire, the greatest that has ever been known. Its ability to produce iron and steel at less than any other country, gave Great Eritain the power to country, gave Great Britain the power to develop its ship-building and ship-owning interests, and to supply the demands of every country for machinery and other manufactured goods. Without its coal and fron it would have been impossible for that country ever to have attained its present pre-eminent position in finance and commerce. And now the sceptre of its power has departed, for it no longer produces the cheapest coal and no longer controls the iron and steel business. We are making nearly double as much iron and steel as Great Britain, and making it at a price that defee competition. We are not only turning out and making it at a property of the raw product, but with astonishing rapidity we are pushing our steel rails, our locomotives, our wood and metal-working machinery into all countries, working machinery into all countries, and are preparing to duplicate in ship-building our phenomenal record in other branches of metallurgical development.

Ten years ago a prediction that before the close of this century we would be furnishing pig iron and steel rails to almost every civilized country, and that our ship yards would be turning out the best war ships ever constructed, with heavy orders from foreign governments, would have been deemed too wild to be worthy of denial. But we have accomplished all this, and preparing to rean the rewards.

With Asia and Africa being opened up to advancing civilization, to the building of railroads, the development of industrial interests, the utilization of modern improvements in agriculture: with Cuba and the Philippine Islands as fertile fields for trade expansion for railroad, manufacture and expansion for railroad and railroad and for railroad and railroad for trade expansion for railroad, manufacturing and agricultural development; with the building of the Nicauraguan canal practically assured. We can see that the world is being made ready for an advance in civilization and in trade greater than ever before known in the history of the human race. With all of these new forces coming into play at a time when we are fully able and ready to outer in and secure a large share of the time when we are fully able and ready to onter in and secure a large share of the work and the wealth to be created, with sectionalism forever ended, with the coming of an era of a better, popular un-derstanding of the true relations between capital and labor and with the gradual disappearance of visionary financialisms, he would be a bold man who would at-tempt to predict the wonderful progress

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

Mr. Frank Hausch Relieved of His Money by Three Negroes. Mr. Frank Hausch, a butcher, living on the Twenty-ninth street road, went off on a spree on a Saturday night about two menths ago.

He had quite a lot of money in his pocket, and had been drinking hard and displaying his money.

Afree young negroes saw the money and they also recognized the almost helpless condition of Hausch, and determined to get possession of the money. At about 12 o'clock on that night Hausch boarded a Clay street car at Marshall and Seventh streets for his home, on Twenty-ninth-street road. The negroes also took the car at Seventh and Broad and remained thereon unta the car reached the Twenty-ninth-street slieds. At that point the entire party slighted.

Mr. Hausch was bewildered, and instead of proceeding on his way home on Twenty-ninth street, he went out toward Libby Hill Park. He was closely followed by the three young negrots.

He was not too drunk to notice that he was being followed, even though he had lost his way, and he made several attempts to frighten on those on his track.

Hausch was surprised to meet a person who knew him, and feit relieved, in view of the fact that he was being followed, as he believed, by pursuers who had sinister designs. But while he was talking some one came up from behind and thrust his hand in his pocket and drew out the bag that contained his money, and the men ran off with their booty.

Mr. Hausch set up a cry of murder and shouted that he had been robbed.

No one responded, so finally the robbed man found himself at home, with his money, about $10, gone.

Complaint was made on the following Monday, and the case has been in the hands of the police.

In the meantime a negro named Wm. Maxifeld, who has been posing as an assistant detective, was arrested on a felony charge, and was sentenced to a term in jail. Other charges followed, and Maxneld will in all probability get a long term in the penitentiary.

Wednesday Maxheld grew remorseful and sent for Detective Gibson and Officer Wren to come to see him at the jail.

Then he confessed that He, in company with his two companions, named James Graves and John H. Allen, had followed Mr. Hausch to Libby Hill and robbed him. The two men were arrested.

Maxield's confession came in the nature of an act of revenge. He had heard that Allen was working up a case against him, and in retailation he gave away the circumstances of the robbery, as given above, and stated further that Allen was the party who learned that the man had the money, and who told him about it.

GOVERNOR TYLER IN WASHINGTON

He Asks for An Appointment for Col. Coulling.

ASKED THAT THE 3RD JOIN LEE.

The Secretary of War Says That H Will Adhere to the Policy of Mixing Up the Regiments of the Different States.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—Special.—Governor J. Hoge Tyler and son were in Washington this afternoon and called on President McKinley and the Secretary of War.

Governor Tyler requested the Fresident to appoint Colonel W. M. Conling to a position in the quartermaster's department. While no actual promise was made, the President icft the impression that he would make the appointments, but whether the rank will be that of captain or major has not yet been determined. PLEAS FOR THE THIRD RWGIMENT.

The Governor had a brief talk with the Secretary of War and made known the earnest desire of many that the Third Regiment should be included in Major-General Lee's command, the Seventh Army Corps at Jacksonville.

General Aiger stated that he would be giad to comply but the policy of amalgamating regiments from different sections had been determined upon and he could not accede to the request. No inforation was given as to the ultimate destination of the regiment and Governor Tyler did not press his inquiries along that line.

WILL NOT JOIN LEE.

WILL NOT JOIN LEE.

As General Alger has set at rest the frequently reiterated rumors that the Third would go to Jacksonville, the reports that the boys would be sent to the Philippines assume more color.

Philippines assume more color.

If the intention had been to send them to cuba or Porto Rico they would hardly have been sent as far north as Camp Alger, they would more probably have been sent to Chickamauga or Tampa. Still they may be held for coast defence or to fill out the ranks of some of the department commanders.

THEY WERE SOUNDED.

It can be stated that it is not the policy of the War Department to antagonise the wishes of the State authorities unless their requests are in conflict with the general policy of the government.

In this connection it will be remembered that the boys of the Third Regiment were recently sounded as to whether they would willingly go to the Philippines.
